LANGDON.

A great excitement was caused in Langdon Saturday night by the receipt of a message from Mrs. Matthews, a widow lady living on a farm about a raile east of this village, requesting that Mounted Officer Knoeffer come to her place as speedily as possible, as she had been much abused curing the evening and clean out the house of Mrs. Matthews and her family. The policen an was not in Langdon when the message reached here, but he was communicated with as speedily as possible, and went to the scene of the trouble as rapidity as his horse could carry him. Upon reaching Mrs. Matthews house he found the may and other inmates of the place in a highly excited condition, and fearing that they were in danger of being murdered, or at least basily mattreated by the man who had made threats against them.

Officer Knoeffler remained at Mrs. Matthews' until it was time for ham to go off duty at midnight, but up to that time there had been no further trouble, nor had anything been seen of the colored man for several hours. It is believed that he heard that the police authorities had been notined concerning his threats, and decided to remain away.

The committee above heard he the decided to remain message reached here, but he was communicated

FALLS CHURCH.

The semi-centennial applyersary of the Presbyterlan Church at Lewissville was largely attended Monday afternion. About twenty-five of the mem bers of the church here were present and many from the church at Vienna. The church was handsomely decorated for the operation with golden rod and potted plants of various kinds. The singing was very fine by a choir from Washington, Miss Mary Brewer presiding at the organ, accompanied by Mr. Harry White of Washington with a corn-A quartet, also from Washington, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Julian P. Dodge, Miss Grace Brewer and and Mrs. Julian P. Dodge, Miss Grace Brewer and Mr. J. Hammond Brewer, rendered several selections. The exercises were opened with the anthem, "Let a Little Sunshine In;" Scriptural reading, the 24th Psain, by Rev. D. H. Riddle, and prayer by Rev. D. L. Rathbun. Rev. F. W. Fished, the present pastor of the church, delivered an address of welcome to the visiting members from Falls Church and Vienna, which two churches are offshoots from the Lewinsville church, which was organized fifty years ago, with nineteen members, africe which time over 300 had united themselves with it, and at the present time has a membership of fifty-three, and the church building in which the exercises were being held, was well preserved and

While the residents of Anacostia have not much expectation that the long-talked-of park to be located on the proposed reclaimed Anacostia flats will be realized for some years, they are much pleased to learn that Engineer Commissioner Powell has had prepared a plan of "Anacostia Park" (to be). If the Commissioner's plans are carried out there will be an athletic field one mile long and 800 feet wide, surrounded by a speedway 100 feet wide for trotting, borseback and bicycle riding. Of course the carrying out of Mr. Powell's plan is dependent upon the appropriation by Congress of a sufficient sum of money to recisim the Anacostia flats along the Anacostia river from the Pennsylvania Avestae bridge to the Maryland line. The advocates of this pan believe that from the flats referred to there could be constructed one of the most beautiful parks in the District. The plan centemphates, in addition to the athletic field and speedway, an elevated driveway overlooking the field, speedway, and river. Several handsome en-

BRIGHTWOOD.

Rev. Reed's sermon last Sunday evening was especially interesting, and on the subject "The Power of the Holy Ghost."

The usual Christian Endeavor meeting last Sunday evening immediately before the regular church services was led by Miss Ella Keene, who spoke commendably on the topic of the meeting, "Are We Doing Our Best?" All present, including rearly every member of the society and many visitors, took active part in the exercises, which resulted in a splendid meeting. A very sweet duet was rendered by Misses Lucy Broster and Emelyn Willett, accompanied by Miss Ella Keene on the organ. It was entitled "Give Thanks Unto God." It was announced that a business meeting will take place immediately after the prayer meeting next Thursday evening. The juniors are to hold a meeting this afternoon on the topic, "How Can We Improve Our Committee Work?"

In reply to a query of The Star correspondent in regard to the Brightwood Railway Company's cars for this winter, Mr. C. W. Williams, who is the secretary and treasurer of the road, said: "The cars we now possess are in a perfect condition for winter service since they have all been repainted and refitted throughout, and electric heaters are being put in them all. Is refer, of course, to the closed motor and trailer cars. In mentioning the heaters I state that the stove heaters which we piaced in our cars winter before last and last winter were as complained of wretched in appearance and occupied too much space, but it must be remembered that this was the first step made in Washington in the way ob-heating street cars. We were the first to do it, and really forced the other lines to do the same."

That portion of Brightwood avenue in front of the Emery place, which has just been widened, is now being graveled, and preparations for a brick sidewaik being made. This last is the work of the Brightwood Avenue Citizens' Association.

Miss Mary Carpenter, formerly of Des Moines street, is now occupying the house just completed by Mr. Diller Groff, proprietor of Brightwood Park, on Genessee street. HE WANTED FRESH AIR.

New York's Coroner Has an Amusing Experience in a Cable Car.

From the New York Tribune. Coroner Hoeber was coming down to business yesterday morning in a Lexington avenue cable car. It may seem strange that a man holding such an exalted office should patronize the meek and lowly cable car, but the coroner believes in encouraging the cabmen of the city to lower their legal rates. The coroner's mind was full of grave subjects yesterday morning. Otherwise he would have noticed that the air of the car was close and heavy long before he got to 12th street. When he did awake to the real condition of the circumambient atmosphere, however, Dr. Hoeber was not slow to act. He turned to the woman who sat beside him and said: sat beside him and said:
"Kint friendt, you id vould doo derribly disgommode, if I der windtow down pud?

The woman looked surprised and took a moment to puzzle it out. Then she said dubiously, "All right." The coroner smiled gratefully and lowered the window. Now the wind was blowing down Broadway at the rate of about twenty miles an hour, and every passenger in the car was soon shivering and looking daggers at the coroner. You see, they least disturbed was the woman whose consent had caused all the trouble. But she was game. She didn't know what she was consenting to when she consented, but hav-ing put her hand to the plough she wasn't going to turn back.

She looked mightily relieved, though, when a tall, gray-haired man on the other side of the car leaned forward and said to the coroner, not knowing he was a coroner; 'Pardon me, but will you kindly lower Coroner Hoeber was too surprised to answer at once. If it had been in his court he would have fined the tall, gray-haired man $200 for his impertinence. As it was he threw back his Holstein shoulders and replied indignantly:

"Der vindtow shud! I vill mosd eggsagdly der vindtow not shud. Vy I der vindtow should shud? Unt sdifle me vid der besti-lential air! Der vindtow shud!" Then he retired upon his dignity. But the tall, gray-haired man was not to be beaten thus easily. He did not know he was dealing with a coroner. He appealed to the conductor, who was just then making a raid through the car. "Make that man put the window down! He's freezing everybody," he said.

The conductor took a look and fled to the rear platform, thereby losing several fares. You see, he knew the coroner. The tall man again appealed to the coroner. Dr. Hoeber arose and bowed to the woman. "Kindt friendt," he said, "do you der breezes from der vindtow disgommode?" This gallantry was too much for her. She tried to smile and replied, "N-o-o, not a b-b-it, th-thank you." Her teeth chattered as she spoke, and the tall man looked daggers at her.

The coroner glanced savagely at the tail man. "I vill der vindtow mosd eggsagdly not shud," he said. Then he sat down. man. Vy dot man should der breezes feel ven I did nod? Hein?"

International Typographical Union. At the convention of the International Typographical Union, at Colorado Springs, Saturday, the subject of providing a hospital in connection with the Childs-Drexel Home for Old Printers, located at Colorado Springs, was discussed. Fifteen thousand dollars was provided by the union for building the hospital, which amount is to be contributed by printers all over the land. A resolution was adopted recommending city be taken from under the civil service aw 'in order to allow a more equitable treatment of union men who may in the future make application for work in that office."

Last night nearly all the delegates had left the city. The officers of the union re-mained behind to attend to several minor matters of business. vention had in many respects been the most important held in the last ten years, and claimed that it had cost $30,000.

Particulars have been received of a raid of the little town of Carney, about twenty miles east of Guthrie, Okla., Saturday night. About 9 o'clock six masked and heavily armed outlaws, supposed to have been headed by the notorious "Dynamite Dick," one of the associates of the Daltons and Bill Doolan, rode into the place and literally "held up" the town. Carney is a town of about 300 people. The robbers entered the village from the north, with a great show of firearms. Two of the outlaws entered the general store of B. Fouts and compelled him and his son to open the safe. After securing about $800 from them they bound both the father and son, threw them upon horses, and car-ried them about two miles out of town, where they tied them to a tree. In the meantime the rest of the gang had entered the post office, but failing to secure anything of value, they raided the hotel, compelling the proprietor and several traveling men who were stopping there to turn over their money, watches and jewelry. Several smaller stores were also raided.

Dangerous English.

The veteran Sig. Arditi is about to celeorate the sixtieth aniversary of his debut at Milan as a boy violinist by issuing a volume of reminiscences. Many funny stories are told about the famous maestro and his efforts at expression in the not too familiar English tongue. The best, per-haps, relates his impromptu speech some years ago at the promenade concert, when Mdlle, de Lido had been detained by a railway breakdown, and, having no time to put on evening attire, she sat for the moment in a private box while the conductor beg-ged the indulgence of the audience, who naturally would have been astonished to see her in traveling costume. Sig. Arditi boldly took the plunge. "Ladies and gensee her in traveling costume. Sig. Around boldly took the plunge. "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "Mdlle, de Lido is undressed in a box. But site will sing if you weesh." And the wicked promenaders laughingly shouted an immediate affirma-

Dinners on the High Wheel.

From the Chicago Record; The management of the Ferris wheel is attempting to introduce 'wheel dinner parties." A car is reserved for any party wishing to have dinner aboard the wheel. There is plenty of room for a long table, and once the guests, the waiters and the supplies are put aboard the car, the happy company may well sail through the are without interruption while the various courses are being served. The car has all the privacy of a separate dining room, and at the same time the company has the open breezes and lovely views sprinkled through the proceedings. Such a dinner party might not appeal to persons who love quiet and retirement, but any one who has been ac-customed to dine to the music of a brass band would probably like this new excite ndence of The Evening Star. PATRAS, Greece, September 30, 1896. A party of Americans belonging to the Theosophical Society are now in Greece They are making a tour of the world in the interest of the religion or doctrine they teach. The fundamental dogma of their belief is "universal brotherhood," and during their stay of four days in Athens they will give a dinner to the Armenian and Cretan refugees. They seem to have plenty of money, and apparently belong to the upper ten-dom of Boston and New York The leader of the party is Mrs. Katherine Tingley, the successor of Mme. Blavatsky I am told that several New York millionaires are of the party.

AN EARTHQUAKE EXPERIENCE

The Second of the Season That Shook the Town of Patras in Greece.

Women of Hellas Have a Hard Time A Theosophical Crusade-The Princess Marie.

An Earthquake Experience. The second earthquake of the season shook Patras yesterday. When the house commenced to rock all the native Greeks rushed into the streets, as pale as ghosts The women began to scream, and in the general uproar it was impossible for me to catch the distinctive rumblings underground, which were heard in the quieter parts of the town to great advantage. I these phenomena. The earthquake was a very short one, and the only damage done was a few big cracks in the stone walls of some of the buildings. The center of the earthquake was at the famous old monastery of Megaspeleon, about thirty miles from here. The monks had to remain out of doors all night, as the vast mountain of rock into which part of the monastery is built, the cells and chapel being hewn out of the solid rock, swayed so much they of the solid rock, swayed so much they were seriously alarmed. Megaspeleon is the richest and one of the oldest monasteries in Greene. It was here that Archbishop Germanos first unfurled the Greek flag, under which the Greeks and Lord Byron fought for the liberation of Helias The monastery has often been used as a fortress and place of refuge for Greek women and children flying from the Turks. Its position renders it impregnable. The Turks resorted to every device known to modern or ancient warfare to capture it. Finally they dislodged an enormous boulder, which overhung the battlements, and when the monks and refugees saw it com-ing they thought their doom was sealed. They crossed themselves and started to pray. The mighty rock stopped half way down the dangerous slope, and the monks turned their prayers into a chant of thanksgiving. Throughout Greece the sudden stopping of the rock was regarded as a miracle. It still overhappes the more story. miracle. It still overhangs the monastery, and, although the monks profess great faith in the seemingly invisible power which holds it in its place, they get out of the monastery when an unusually severe earthquake comes! The presence of the rock on the slope over the monastery is no myth. It is there, and can be seen any day by the tourist. All human efforts to dislodge it have been futile, but the effect of a seismic disturbance is quite another thing, and the monks act wisely in getting out of its reach when the earth begins to quake, as it frequently does at this season of the year in Greece.

One Emancipated Woman.

The condition of women in many parts of Greece is deplorable. A man's wife is regarded as his chattel. If he is poor she does nearly all the hard work, and does not rank with the sons she bears him, by any means. In some of the interior districts she is made to pull a plow, sometimes being hitched up with an ox! But the sense of freedom is beginning to penetrate the minds of these people, and one Greek wo-man at least has stepped to the front with The tall man arose and left the car.
"'Vy should I der vindtow shud?" said the coroner afterward. "Der admosvere vas held a high position under King Otho. She lig dot off der morgue. Der undervear dot spent eight years in Paris and distinguished I vear vas very lide. I did not der breezes herself. The king and Greek people heard of it, and on her return to Athens she was appointed instructor to the Princess Marie, who will soon marry the Russian grand who will soen marry the Russian grand duke. Afterward King George appointed her inspector of all public schools in Greece. She travels alone from one end of the coun-try to the other, and is treated with great respect. She is the first Greek girl who ever made such progress, but she will not be the last. Women teachers in Greece rank little higher than servants, and they are very badly paid. Two hundred dollars a year is the highest salary they ever get. The professors in the University of Athens do not receive over $300 a year. The rame of the lady who is today the Susan B. Anthony of Hellas, is Miss Sevasti Callisperi. The fact that her father was a Nomarch and that she is in favor at court, are two factors greatly to her advantage. She has almost absolute authority over the women teachers of Greece, is a member of the Archaeological and other learned societies of Athens, and if her plans succeed she will be able to do a great deal for the improvement of her sex in this country. Distinguished American Travelers.

Two distinguished Americans have just completed a tour of Greece. They are the Rev. Doctors D. J. O'Connell and J. A. Zahn. Dr. O'Connell is president of the American School in Rome, was private secretary to Cardinal Gibbons for a long time and is well known throughout America. Dr. Zahn is an older brother of Professor Zahn of the Catholic University of America, and has filled many high positions in connection with the Catholic colleges of America. They, with the American consul at Patras, and his aunt, Mrs. C. W. Harris, who has been on a long visit to him. have been invited to a unique dinner by The invitation has been accepted. The din-ner will be served under the olive trees that grow on the crest of the high hid on which the ancient monastery stands. A whole lamb will be cooked over the coals of an open fire and served with some of the rarest wine in Greece. These monks keep the finest wines and choicest liquors in the kingdom of Hellas. They own large vine-yards and orchards, and their guests on this occasion know that while the menu will be limited, the fruit and wines will be equal to any served at a feast of Lucullus. The view from this monastery is su-perb. On one side is a magnificent sweep of the Ionian sea, dotted with islands and environed by splendid mountains. On the other is the lofty peak Olonos with fertile valleys. Curving around the other two sides are the high mountains of the his-toric range to which Parnassos belongs. The monks belong to the ancient order of St. Basil and the monastery is very old. The Princess Marie.

In a few weeks the papers will be full of the coming marriage of Princess Marie of Greece to the yourg Russian grand duke, who is now on a visit to the royal family. This Princess Marie is very popular in Greece. She has some of the demo cratic tendencies of her brother, Prince George. They tell a story of her to this effect. Some time ago she was taking a lesson from one of her governesses when the lady, who was not very well, asked permission to send for a glass of water. The princess immediately jumped up, went for the water and handed it to the governess, who protested in vain against such an unroyal proceeding! They say the Princess Marie is very kind-hearted, and this act of courtesy would seem to confirm the report. Her coming marriage to a Russian is not regarded with especial favor by the Greeks, who know that half their troubles with the sultan are due to what in Europe is called "Russian diplomacy." She has a pleasant face and fine character. She has frequently mentioned as a proper bride for the Prince of Naples, who is to wed Princess Hellene of Montenegro, but Russian influence is very strong at the Athenian court and generally prevails.

THIS WAS ANOTHER STORY. Brown Had Made a Fool of Himself and There Was No Denying It.

If You Are...

From the Chicago Post. The man who was sitting in the corner of the library of the club reading a magazine attracted the attention of the thoughtful man who was smoking a pipe, and he took the pipe from his mouth long enough to remark:

"I feel awfully sorry for Brown." "What's the matter with him?" asked the man who had been trying to read a

"Not the way Brown did," corrected the man with the pipe. "Let me tell you—"

"Oh, I know the story better than you can tell it," interrupted the man with the paper. "I've been through it myself twice. He made up his mind cigars were hurting him and consulted a doctor; doctor told him he was right and ought to quit; decided he'd take the doctor's advice, and then pretty nearly smoked himself into his grave for a few days getting ready to swear off; swore off and had to quit work at noon the first day on account of his at noon the first day on account of his nerves; second day swore at his wife for the first time since they were married, and licked one of the children for speaking above a whisper when he was in the

The fact is, I'm not posted on all the details of the story, and was only thinking of the particular ture of it in which Brown made an 18-karat fool of himself."

"Of course. I'm coming to that," said the man with the paper. "We'll say that he kept it up for three or four days, and then broke ever after promising himself that he would smoke only one eigar, and—" "But he didn't." "Oh, well: maybe he stuck it out a week or even a fortnight and then—"
"I knew you had another story in mind," broke in the man with the pipe, disgusted-

'He didn't break over at all. He's still I was sorry for him? Do you suppose I'd have any occasion to be sorry for him if he was smoking again? Of course not. It's only because he's blamed fool enough to stay quit that he excites any sympathy.

A Barbarous Exhibition. From the British Medical Journal.

A correspondent describes an exhibition of hanging which is attracting large was crowds of morbid spectators at Paris: "A man is attached by a cord to the ceiling. He is dressed in a blouse, with a red muffler around his neck. His head is bent toward his chest. His face is thin and bony and appears convulsed, his eyes are almost shut, his veins are swollen and the complexion is ashen. The arms drap down at a little distance from the body; his hands are contracted, the fingers bent The veins are so swollen that they seem on the point of bursting. The legs hang straight and stiff. This barbaro-is spec-tacle is served up with an accompaniment of music. It is observed that when th music strikes up the hanging man is seized with painful convulsions. In this position he will remain thirteen days; after that trial he will remain buried 565, and will then take his place among the living. The rest the man takes in this hanging position consists of leaning against a ladder which is placed in a position to permit him to doze without in the least changing his attitude. During this time he is rub bed with a sedative lotion and inhales ether. No food of any kind is taken."

There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitrting the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine arti-cle, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed.
